Always encouraging when one looks at a list and knows that if all else fails, you could happily drink from the 'by the glass' list alone. Of course, nothing else fails with this wonderfully extensive and exciting list. Classics, cult wines, future stars, mature gems. A list with the lot. And what a collection of DRC!

Right from the outset, it is obvious that France, especially Bordeaux, plays the dominant role in this extensive and impressive list. That does not mean that there are not many other options from top producers around the globe, from the great regions. A list which has been compiled by a team which knows it stuff. This is a great Italian restaurant with an outstanding Italian list. The possibilities begin with wines by the glass which offer many great Italian varietals from all parts of the country while Coravin offers us 15 year old aglianico from Campania and 17 year old Barolo from Piedmont. While it's a wonderful Italian list, it covers all parts of the globe with respect for the great wines of other countries. Best of all is the chef's ability to marry the flavours of his best dishes with outstanding Italian wines. Check out the degustation menus!

The 'wines by the glass' selection immediately marks this as a list which will take the customer on an expedition through great Italian wines. And so it goes, but with serious attention paid to mature bottles. Delve further and there are numerous other options, from English fizz to Bulgarian Chardonnay. Local wines well represented. A wonderful list.

It is fabulous to see the wine list synchronised with the restaurant's Italian Japanese fusion theme. So you can start with bubbles, including Italian Franciacorta, or perhaps some sake, and finish the meal with a Japanese whisky or an Italian Grappa. The wine selection by the glass (and half bottle) is thoughtful and diverse in style and origin. The main list opens with a set of prestigious cellar reserve wines, including many rare Italians, plus a couple of high-end Bordeauxs and Burgundies for those wanting to splurge. But the strength of the main list is in the broad spectrum of prices and origins, with quality being at the forefront of all listing decisions. It is an original list with personality and flair, and one can have confidence in the wines.

This is a tour de force! A wonderfully thought-out list that matches food and wine with care and even aplomb. No drink is a better match for oysters than excellent sparkling wine. The dominance of champagne and sparkling wine and appropriate whites gives the list a focus that few achieve. The fact that such a reasonable percentage of the list is offered by the glass means that the possibilities for exploring are significantly improved. The judges would hope that the careful thought that has gone into structuring this list should attract the attention of other sommeliers. Bravo!

Without putting it too finely, the list at The Aubrey is sensational. It is not only the premium selection of wines that has clearly been curated with flair, nuance and patience that cements this as one of the great Izakaya wine lists, it is the sensitive match of cuisine and food that elevates it to company with the greats. Numerous champagnes available by the glass as a nod to its supreme suitability to Japanese food, the feature brewery, the vast selection of sakes... must we go on? The total number of wines listed herein is verging on modest, at just over 200 wines, however every available space has been taken up by a thoroughly deserving wine or drink, making this one of the great lists to visit. If you gravitate toward Japanese cuisine and love great wine, you must visit here. You simply must.

Too often, aged wines exclsuively occupy the domain of the most elite - both in pricing and rarity. Here, at Aurora, there is the opportunity to drink aged wine at a variety of prices, from a number of different regions, which we as drinkers applaud. Speaking of aged wines, the vertical of Chateau Latour (Paulliac) from 1945 - 2005 is an eye-watering affair, impressive from both a collectors viewpoint, and a historical one as well. However - without jumping the gun - a very impressive, authorative list here at Aurora. If the balanced and exciting selection available by the glass is anything to go by, the bottle list beyond should be stellar - and it is. If you're a Champagne fan, this is the place for you, and if not, we are certain there are literally hundreds of other titillating options available.

This is a first class luxury collection of wine and is based on the master list of the Grand Lisboa Hotel in Macau. It has a bewilderingly good range of vintages of the most sought after wines in the world. Few, if any, places in the world could match it. There's an astounding presentation of Dom Perignon and a comprehensive list of luxury champagnes; multiple vintages of all of the great white Burgundies and Chablis; Vouvrary from Marc Bredif back to 1893; surely the world's best collection of sweet German whites; all the greatest producers of Red Burgundy in the great years, not only the best Bordeaux but several vintages of less well-known St Emilion. As well as all this, there are heaps of top Californian, Australian, Italian and Spanish reds as well as dessert wines and fortifieds. Y'quem back to 1825: who would believe. We would like to see more younger, fresher whites and a more appropriate list by the glass, given the restaurant's Italian theme.

This exquisite, high-end list has wine from two regions only: Champagne and Burgundy. The delicacy, complexity and refinement of these two highly prized wine styles complement the restaurant's Neo-Teochew cuisine. It is a highly curated selection, with quality at the forefront of all the listing decisions. Within the Champagne selection, you can choose from grand, well-known houses or small growers. Within Burgundy, a range of appellations are represented, so you will find good entry-level options plus many premier and grand cru wines. It is a glittering array of the best producers ensuring diners can have a wine experience of the highest degree.

Among the big names that populate the Huaiyang Garden wine list there are some exciting and adventurous draw cards. Wines by the glass lists a number of them such as Nyetimber sparklings from England, Framingham pinot noir and Torbreck Juveniles grenache blend. Among its many strengths the list seeks out a particularly strong selection of wines from the Napa Valley, Rhone Valley, Portugal and Tuscany in addition to a solid core of quality French names.

For example, if you want to drink a wine from the Mosel or Tuscany, there is just one to choose from. There are some exceptions. For instance, Pauillac has several options, and there's a page of wines from Domaine de la Romanée-Conti. Although there are many expensive and prestigious wines, there are also a good number of entry-level labels. There is also an extensive list of Chinese spirits. Keep an eye on vintage when ordering, and tap into the knowledge of the sommeliers for guidance or pairing recommendations.

The North winelist mirrors that of its compatriot restaurant Portofino both curated by Leon Tan. European wines are the focus with Tan curating an extraordinary selection of Italian and French wines, many with significant cellar age. This particularly applies to the Champagne section with a number of wines dating back to the 1990's. That said, there's ample interesting and affordable wines from across the vinous globe with the depth of large format bottles an added feature.

The succinct wine list is fresh and modern, offering a great range of global styles. It's packed with affordable wines that are good examples of their type, plus a few ultra-premium wines for the big spenders. Oysters are a speciality of the restaurant, with around 14 different varieties available, so it's fitting to see a page of 'oysterlicious' wines. The unpretentious nature of the list is to be commended, as it the balance, value and variety of styles. As a result, patrons can have a solid and satisfying wine experience without breaking the bank.

This luxury collection of wine is based on the master list of the Grand Lisboa Hotel in Macau. It has a bewilderingly good range of vintages of the most sought-after wines in the world. Few, if any, places could match it. There's an astounding presentation of Dom Perignon and a comprehensive list of luxury champagnes; multiple vintages of all of the great white Burgundies and Chablis; surely the world's best collection of sweet German whites; all the greatest producers of Red Burgundy in the great years and the best Bordeaux. As well as all this, there are heaps of top Californian, Australian, Italian and Spanish reds as well as dessert wines and fortifieds. Wines by the glass are outstanding: starting with a choice of four champagnes, a small yet first rate international collection of whites and reds, four sweet wines, five fortifieds as well as three levels (Discovery, Privilege and Imperial) of wines by the glass with the degustation menus. Mind-blowing.

It's not a rich vein of Burgundy or Bordeaux wines although that can be found here - but rather one of the more impressive statements ever made about the state of Chinese wine production. It is a serious collection of wines. There's also the rare opportunity to try top producer, Ao Yun by the glass, something not to be missed. The list is organised by grape variety which highlights the excellent diversity of grapes - and choice - that exists from gruner veltliner and viura to nerello mascalese and mourvedre. Enjoy.

A small but thoughtful wine list that covers a lot of world wine territory. The use of handy category headings such as Easy Drinking, Fruit Driven, Medium & fruity and Powerful, etc., throughout the list guide diners with their choices. Styles are modern, vintages tend towards the fresh and mostly youthful ,and many producers are small and quality-orientated. Should you prefer something more iconic with bottle age, then the Private Cellar collection at the end of the list is for you. Here, you will find Gaja, Jermann, Meo-Camuzet, Lafite, Haut Brion and more.

A thoroughly modern, youthful list that has something for everyone. To start, there is a small, well-chosen selection by the glass. The Champagne pages are a mix of large houses and growers, so you can order something familiar or something new. The list is divided into Old World, China and New World, so if you are looking for, for example, white wine, you will need to look in each of the three sections. The classic European wine regions are well-represented. Though it is also pleasing to see many modern names from Australia. In line with fashion, you'll also find a few examples of 'natural wine', including some amber styles. And if you are after an exceptional bottle, turn to the prestige wine section at the back of the list.

Extraordinary doesn't quite sum up this astonishing winelist. Its a vinous tour of the world's very best wines with the classics from Champagne, Burgundy and Bordeaux the pick of the bunch. Not only that but many of these icon wines are offered in multiple vintages. The 'by the glass' list is exemplary with the top-notch selection served via Coravin adding extra clout. Prices are suitably high, pushed by the scarcity of many of these gems. All in all, an amazing effort - well done Yang Lu and Jacobs Zhang.

I applaud the lengthy selection of local Chinese wines featured with pride at the front of the list, including almost thirty labels from eight different regions. There is also a strong focus on the wines of France, particularly from Champagne, Burgundy and Bordeaux, though you will also find wines from the Jura, Alsace and the Loire Valley. Other European countries such as Italy, Spain and Germany also have good representation. Finally, there is a diverse spread from the New World, including a sophisticated selection from Australia.

An inspiring wine list where it's possible to tick off some of those bucket list wines you always wanted to try because here many are served by 75ml and 150ml pours including Keller, Comtes Lafon, Chateau Grillet, Biondi-Santi and more. Once past the enticing wines by the glass, a fabulous world of wine that awaits. The best wines of Italy and France are placed under the microscope - the Champagne collection is particularly mouth-watering - and quality names from a supporting cast of countries, regions and makers dot the pages. The promotion of Chinese wines deserves your particular attention.

A real draw card for wine lovers will be the wines by the glass listing at Wild Yeast, with many top names served under Coravin including Au Bon Climat, Bernard Moreau and Tignanello. Should you venture further, some real treats can be found. Champagne offers a list of exciting grower producers in addition to superstar big houses. Burgundy and a feature on Germany's Weingut Keller shines under the white wine category, while it's Bordeaux and Burgundy's turn under the red wine listing. Natural wine, including skin contact and the low-fi styles from France and Italy are also a nod to the changing wine times.

This wine list starts with a super impressive wines by the glass selection and, for many diners, that is where they will wish to stay the night. It is an excellent, extensive collection of top European wine names led by Hugel, Trimbach, Georges Verney, Antinori, Petit-Figeac and more. Venture a little further into the main list and it is sprinkled with many elite names throughout. The Champagne selection is particularly attractive before a run of excellent Burgundy, Bordeaux follows. In-depth produce profiles on Lafon, Dönnhoff and DRC bring an added gravitas.

This list has enormous potential. The Somms need to work on its presentation so that it becomes a list of which they can be proud. There is no indication of which of its massive number of wines are available by the glass. There's no indication of anything much except the name of the wine. It seems like a great place to visit and talk to the Somms about the wines.

You know you're in for a premium experience when all the wine is served in Riedel glassware, and the wines by the glass, which are excellent, are served by Coravin. It is fabulous to see a page of fine Chinese wine to open the list, followed by a selection of fine Champagne. Next, there is a strong focus on the wines of Burgundy, with many prestigious producers on offer. There is also a succinct set of Bordeaux. To finish, patrons can enjoy a polished selection of Scottish and Japanese whisky.
